Locker-lined Halls Set Scenes for New Homeroom Hunters

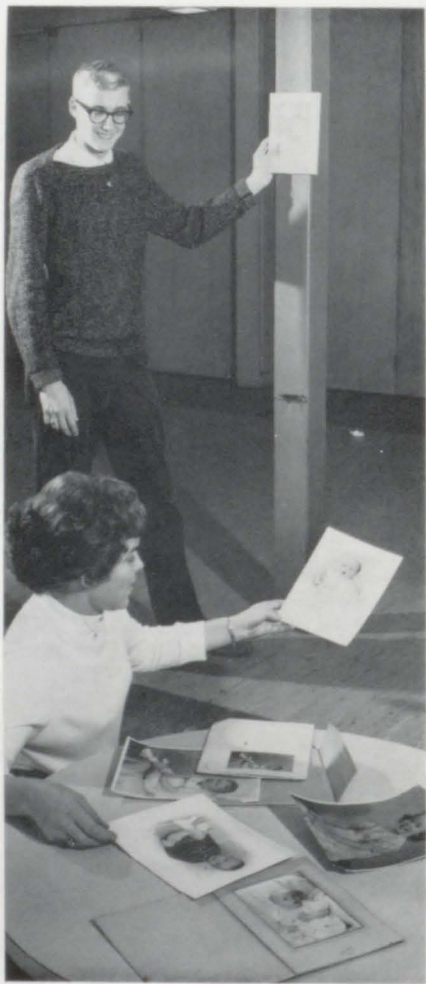

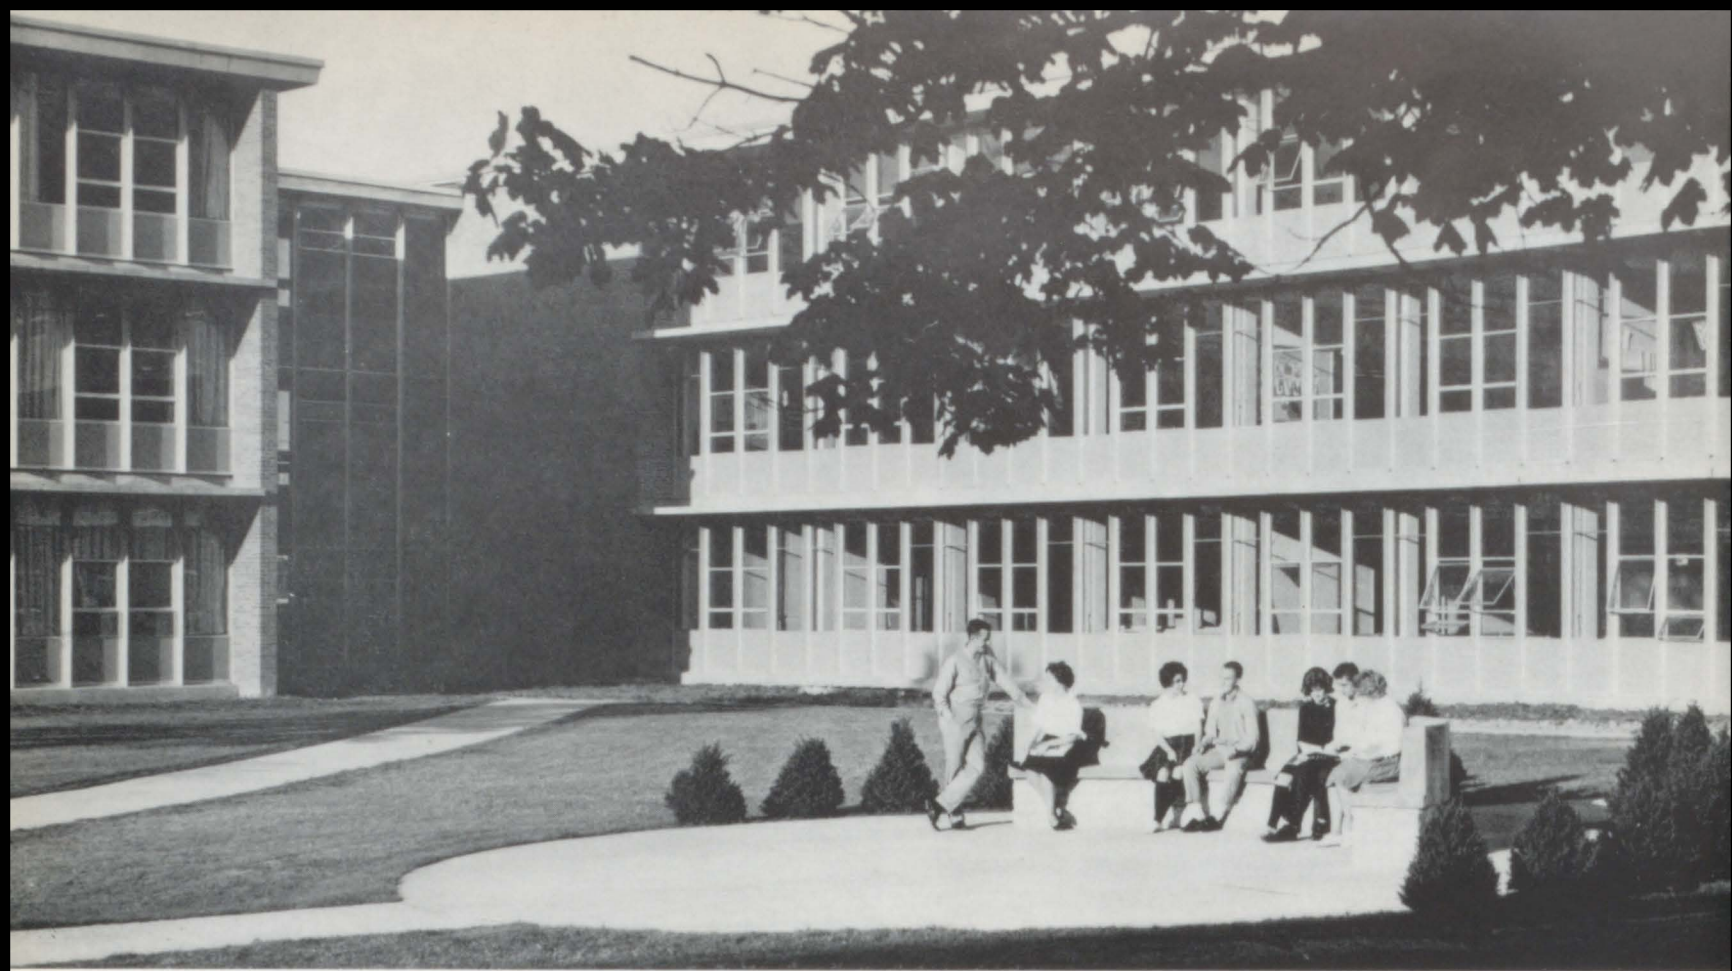

For the eight hundred ninety-seven members of the class of '66, the chaotic week which began on September fourth was the fresh start of a new and exciting experience. Schedules, hall locks, and Red Books added to the confusion of each hectic day that ended in a mad rush for a crowded bus. For Proviso West's three returning classes, registration and homeroom assignments initiated the fall season of the 1962-1963 school year that revived the almost-forgotten pleasures of a six-thirty alarm, a five-B lunch period, and a race with the bell in crowded halls.

Pineapplestems and Senior Class Swing To 'Aloha' Melody

It was "Aloha" on Friday night the seventh that began the frantic senior pace for the class of '63. Ahead lay a time of strenuous mental exertion with a little bit of every kind of happiness tossed in for variety. The hours, days, weeks, and months seemed to pass quickly with the added honors of class rings, picture proofs, and exclusive Senior Circle. Get-togethers and dances formed a delightful contrast to the endless busy hours and a faint echo of "study, study, study, study . . ." A desperate hunt for an old baby picture, college applications, a major letter, valiant cramming for lost note cards, innumerable fees, "quiet" moments in the library, and a bent locker all blended into a truly active senior life and unforgettable memories in the making.

Victorious Panthers and a Comely Queen "Dream Under the Big Top"

Wednesday, Thursday, and even after Friday night's pep assembly, many last adjustments were being made. Nevertheless, finished and barely finished floats alike all lined up by noon on October sixth. Clowns, crowd, and court cheered as a flurry of balloons marked the kickoff. Touchback and touchdown combined to form the 6-2 victory over Morton West and to make Profile's winning slogan, "Let's Make Monkeys Out of the Falcons," come true. Mums, music, and crepe paper trimmed a "Dream Under the Big Top" that was highlighted by Reggy the Ringmaster and his menagerie. Queen Mary Lou Nicholos received her crown, and the many hours of planning, working, and waiting made Proviso West's second homecoming end too quickly for both alumni and students who attended the reunion activities.

Achievements Earn Honor Roll, Athletic Letters and Medals

In past years the honor roll pin brought distinction and library privileges to those students who had achieved academic excellence. This year the trend was changed by the distribution of permanent honor roll cards. The student who saw his name on the honor roll scroll for the first time soon found himself striving to see his name placed on the adjacent scroll for scholarship award winners. Praise was also given to valuable team members when they received numerals and letters which were evidence of many practice and playing hours.

Four Seniors Enter Competition on 'It's Academic' Program

Activities other than school work attracted interested, ambitious students. Four seniors gave up several evenings and weekends to represent Proviso West on the television program, It's Academic. Attracted to study beyond the classroom, hours were spent after school in the library or practicing musical instruments for band or orchestral concerts. The student commons was often filled with groups of students helping each other with difficult assignments or discussing controversial subjects. Often academic life continued after the school day.

Imagination, Music, Decorations Create Memorable Dances

Junior girls in varieties of blue-toned dresses danced with their dates to "Moon River" in a "Rhapsody in Blue" atmosphere. The sophomores launched their social season on Oct. 30, when they gathered to drink cokes and reminisce over freshman year. Behind these coke-hours and semi-formal affairs were many busy, sometimes frantic hours. Volunteers for decorations and music committees found themselves in a turmoil trying to finish decorations and arrange music. All effort was rewarded as couples rose to dance to the opening music.

Interim of Relaxed Conversation Varies Routine of Schedules

For the many faculty members who held the positions of coaches and faculty advisors, the day's work continued long after the 3:25 bell. They devoted their ability and their time to guiding and encouraging ambitious athletes and student leaders. Performing their daily obligations, teachers managed to take a brief break between classes or during free periods. It was not often that they got the chance to get away from a monotonous blackboard and a "hundred" waving hands. Off they went at the sound of the bell—red pencil, papers, and green grade book in hand—to their "twilighted faculty zone."

Brief Relaxing and Mad Rushing Pack Six Minute Breaks

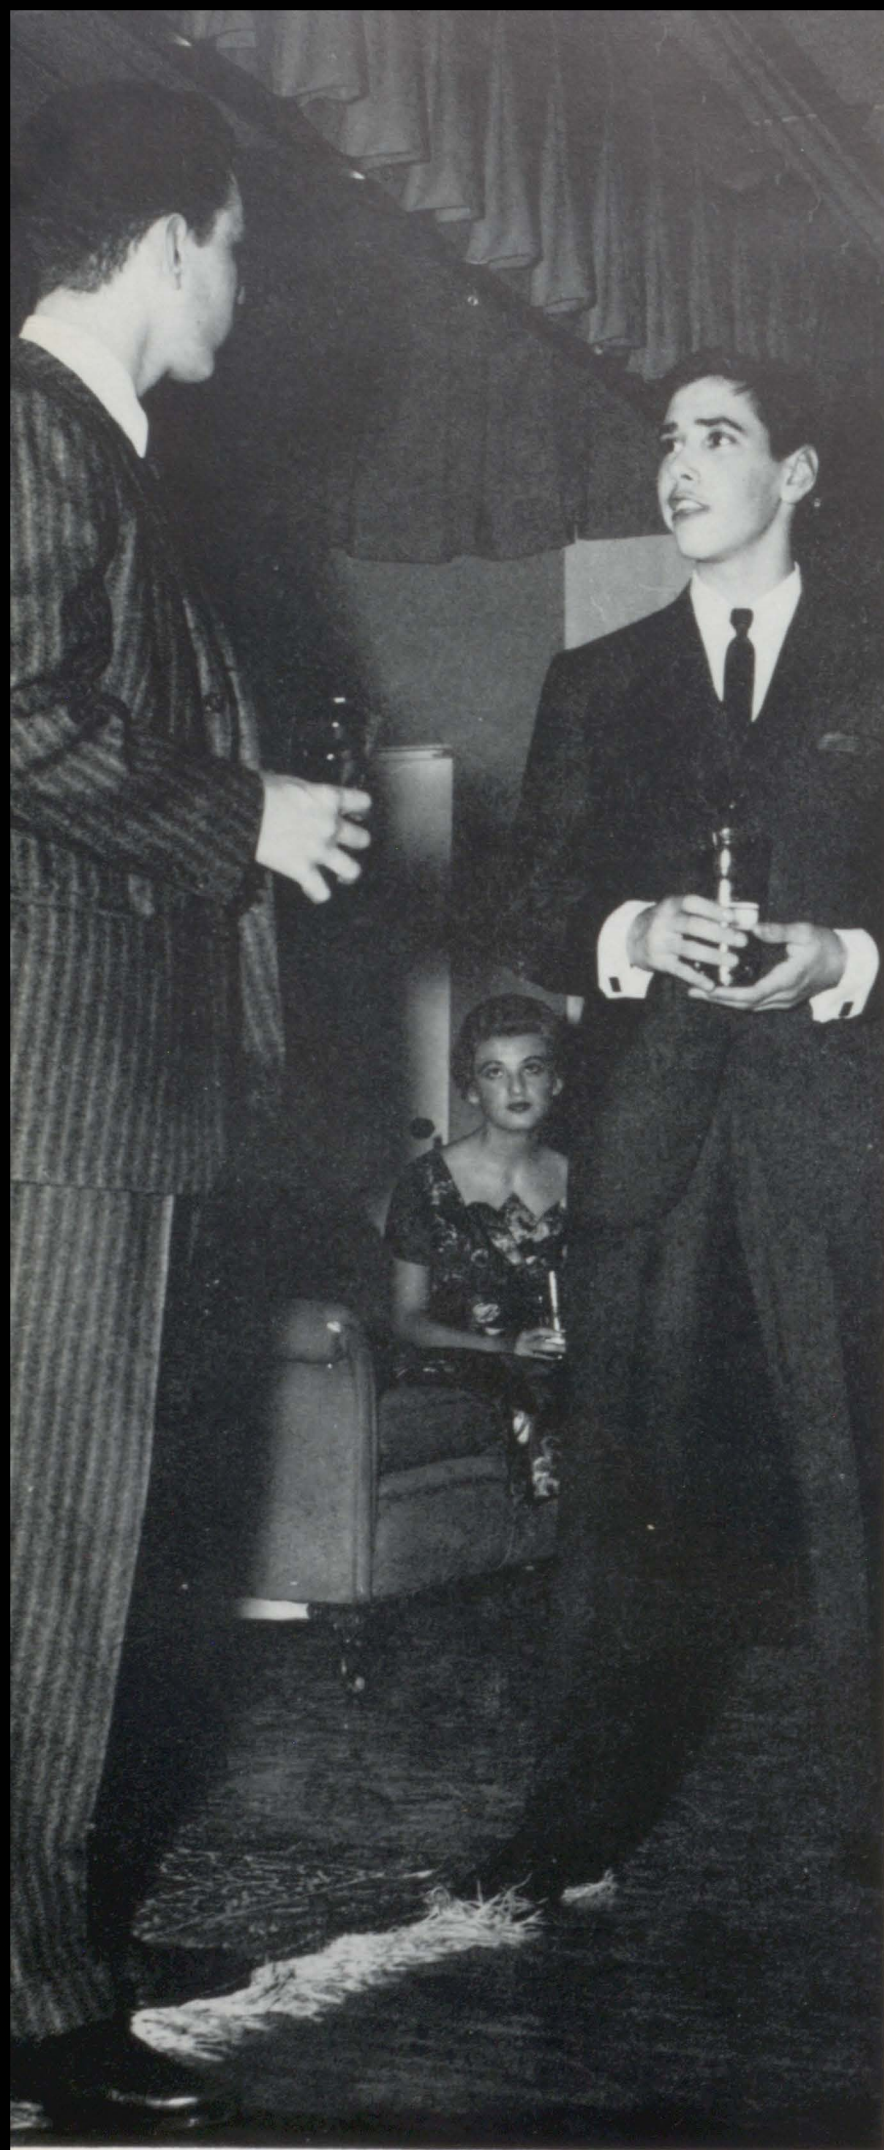

Seven times daily 3,300 students swarmed into Proviso West's crowded corridors. All classmen faced the challenge of racing the bell to the next class; losers often found themselves with after school engagements. During the six minute break, quick hair combing sessions and hurried conversations helped to jam washrooms. Long lines formed not only behind mirrors but at the drinking fountains. The blissful bell ending the day sent thousands of tired Provisoites in their individual directions, home work, after school jobs, school organizations, or sports.

Full Cast Presents Shakespearean Play In Period Costumes

This fall Little Theater audiences viewed Dial M for Murder, the first theatrical production of the year. Rehearsals and scenery transformed the stage into a modern London apartment. The intricate plot was enacted by a cast of six and directed by Mrs. Sarane Siewerth. The mood of jealous, desperate revenge changed to a story of star-crossed lovers with the school's first Shakespearean play. Directed by Mr. Mearel Nesterby, Romeo and Juliet was presented with simple, abstract scenery and elaborate costumes in March.

Bicycling Key Club Leads Santa Claus In Joyous Assembly

Despite the cold winds and snowy days, the Proviso West halls were filled with a holiday air. Many students and Student Council members enjoyed decorating the traditional Christmas tree in the commons area. Large candles inscribed with holiday greetings brightened senior circle. Along with the last school day of 1962 came the annual dress up day and assembly. Students donned in their Sunday best filed into the girls' gym to be entertained with choral and band selections. Of course, dependable Santa bounced in swinging a bag of treats for some impersonated faculty members.

Exams Bring Tension and Hectic Study Hours with Completion of Semester

Christmas vacation having just come to an end, the weight of first semester finals descended on West's three thousand students. Beginning on January twenty-third, atmosphere and attitude changed with lengthened periods and shortened days that were void of lunch time. Accuracy, speed, coordination, and serious thinking played an important part in a wide range of exams. Nightmares of time-rushed essays on Milton, Emerson, or Shakespeare, jammed typewriter keys, sinus draining bobs, and electrographic erasures were dispersed by the following evening's fun night. For seniors the semi-annual event returned on June sixth shortly before the prom; underclassmen went to inquisitions the eleventh through the thirteenth. The weeks of study and hours of "review" were made manifest on paper with IBM pencils moist with perspiration in exchange for a summer vacation.

Loyalty Committee Spurs Enthusiastic 'Kemo Sabe' Cheer

A crowded gymnasium, flushed cheerleaders, wildly enthused spectators, and a bolstered team spirit—these were some of the fine results produced by the Student Council Loyalty Committee. Spurred on by thoughts of a trophy, each class competed for the highest game attendance. Cries of "Kemo Sabe" were louder than ever while individual competition raged. Loyalty at sports events also meant obeying tags worn by students demanding "whisper." As the year progressed classes found a niche in school support while their members rallied to boost spontaneous enthusiasm.

Jobs, Study, Quiet Hours Succeed an Active School Day

Proviso personnel filled the hours after three twenty-five with an abundance of activities. Faculty members could replace the grade book and "Mister" with a story book and "Daddy." A shopping spree in the Center, a baby sitting job with neighborhood youngsters, and piano practice made the hours pass too quickly. Students settled down with good intentions and a pile of text books, but often the lure of TV spectaculars or gnawing hunger interrupted their productivity. The best time, however, was the weekend when responsibilities could be shelved for the movies.

Posters, Assemblies, and Ballots Combine to Form West's School Elections

Planning, writing, and worrying were devoted to one-minute election speeches that were given by all candidates running for an office. Unique posters and precinct election board screening formed steps to the podium on March 20. Three representatives chosen from each homeroom received instruction in organization and operation of school elections. Having registered previously, conscientious students had the opportunity to cast their votes. Ballots were distributed in homerooms and then collected by representatives to be counted by the election committee. The student council election committee ended their month's work by making final tabulations and posting results on respective class bulletin boards. Nervously anticipated, names were examined and commented upon as either expected or unexpected officers-elect relaxed amidst a host of friendly congratulations.

Keck Haunts West At Annual Variety Show Performance

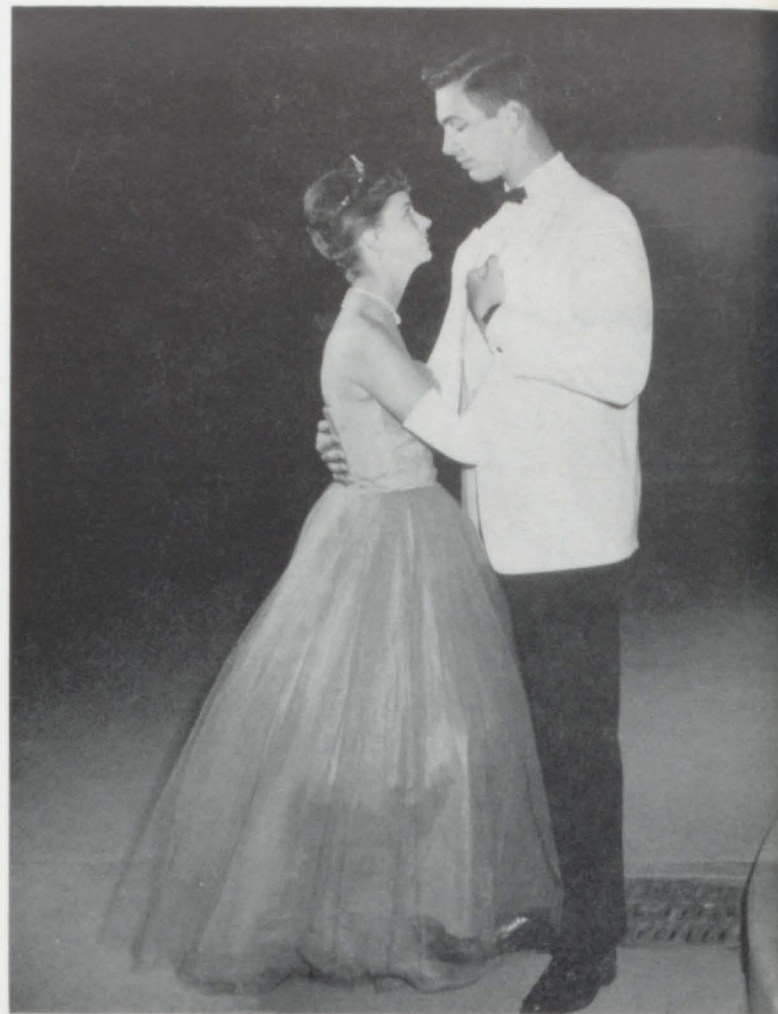

In February, Mrs. Karen Rosenblate's crew of dancers, vocalists, and comedians searched the entire country for an alumnus who had failed to show up for an awards assembly. Someone asked, "What Ever Happened to Harvey Keck?" and the musical production proceeded from New York to an educational ballet. Soon after Harvey's return, the Little Theatre curtain rose again for the annual spring dance show. Girls from the Orchesis and advanced choreography classes became ready-made brunettes for the numbers from The King and I under Mrs. Mildred Katz.

A Woodland Scene Develops Romantic Prom Atmosphere

With the tension of exams a memory, seniors spent June eighth in preparation for "A Woodland Night." Suspended decorations effected a veritable midnight forest where stars reflected in artistically constructed streams. By ten o'clock members of the class of '63 and guests had passed through the receiving line and were dancing to Lane Emery's music. After pausing once for a souvenir photograph and again for refreshments, couples strolled into the mall. Through glass walls, seniors viewed a pastel kaleidoscope of formals accented by black and white tuxedos. A blurry merge of elaborate color and the sound of fading music remained in senior memories long after the prom's final moments.

Arrow Turns from '63 to '64 at Annual Class Night Rituals

Class members assembled for a banquet held in their honor that preceded a march to the gym where Class Night guests awaited the entertainment to begin at eight o'clock. President Rod Lindsay handed over the ribbon-decked arrow, and the first 1963 Mural was presented to Mr. Stubbs. Dr. Knoepfel gratefully accepted the class gift, a sundial for the Senior Circle. After the amusing, historical skits, seniors adjourned to their homerooms where Murals were quickly unpacked and distributed. Groups returned to the commons area for refreshments, and yearbook signing.

June 12th Heralds 640 Red-Clad Seniors at 3rd Commencement Exercise

As proud parents and relatives entered the school gymnasium on the evening of Wednesday, June twelfth, they received programs of the commencement ceremonies from usherettes dressed in white. At eight o'clock seniors clad in red caps and robes marched in and nervously stood for the anthem and prayer. The Class was seated for the addresses of President Rod Lindsay, Vice-President Mike Crosser, Superintendent Knoepfel, and Principal Stubbs. Excitement reached its climax when the last students accepted their diplomas. Mixed feelings shown on smiling and tear-streaked faces while afterwards, outside in the mall, frantic enthusiasm appeared as an extremely confused scene of real happiness. Counselors and teachers extended congratulations and final good-byes to picture-taking parents and very familiar students in an atmosphere of ecstatic conversation.

Ceramic, Metal Art Work Reveal Creative Abilities In Contemporary Designs

The art department induced individual appreciation and expression in the fine and applied arts. Courses in art first introduced the basic fundamentals of lettering, simple design, color schemes, drawing, and painting. Advanced students employed these rudimentary techniques in a more complicated manner. Correct proportion and shading became indispensable knacks in the use of chalk, paint, and charcoal. Pencil sketches, good composition, and final oil paintings of a treescape or a profile on canvas were end products which gave great satisfaction. Those who preferred crafts used their abilities to combine abstract ideas with material forms. Wood, clay, plastics, and metals were transformed into modern and classical shapes. Proper illustrations had meaning for artists interested in commercial application. Accurate lettering and styled layouts were adopted for problems similar to those of magazine and newspaper advertising. With no prerequisites, any student could gain a knowledge of the value of great painting, music, architecture, and sculpture through the study of humanities.

A different outlook in business education appeared in the commercial department this year. The growing diversified occupations division stressed active participation in business situations. The organizations sponsoring diversified occupations members included chemical laboratories, department stores, meat packaging plants, and grocery stores. Under the guidance of trained people representing these companies, participants received vocational instruction helpful to successful futures. The older division of the department is situated on the third floors of buildings C and D where the pounding keys and clanging bells resounded from typing classes. In addition to Type I and II, girls and boys participating in secretarial curricula selected a wide range of courses which might include shorthand, general business, commercial law, and money management. Salesmanship and retailing brought people into the study of the business world. A proficiency in operating and understanding the complex equipment used today was gained in office and calculating machines. Office practice gave seniors a comprehensive review of secretarial skills for clerical and secretarial positions.

Students Visit Vocational Guidance Center About College, Career Choices

The counselors at Proviso West spent the school year helping students with school activities as well as with their personal problems. The first undertaking was the orientation of new students. Helping transfer students and freshmen become accustomed to school life at West was a major task handled by the nine members on the staff. Scrambled schedules and class transfers were all untangled in their busy offices during the first two weeks of school. The counselors also helped students choose academic courses and count credits needed for graduation and as pre-requisites for colleges and careers. The new Vocational Guidance Center in C-114 aided students planning the years after graduation. Pre-college Night in the fall and College Day in the spring were sponsored by the counselors to inform college bound students about the schools of their choice and to help the undecided student choose a college best suited to his needs. Students planning to work after graduation or to attend trade schools also received help from the vocational counselor. Family, social, and financial problems of the students received attention from the counselors. Students revealed their problems in confidence, and the counselors rendered valuable advice which helped students emotionally and scholastically.

Shakespearean Tragedies Illustrate Intricacies of Classic Drama to Seniors

Investigating all phases of his language, each student of the English department studied the basics of grammar and analyzed literature of all periods. Run-on sentence, comma splice, double negative—these were terms familiar to all freshmen as they became further acquainted with the complexities of sentence structure and good usage. Further emphasis on grammar and a broad survey of literature was the program for the sophomore English classes. Equipped with this basic knowledge, the junior had an opportunity to enroll in more intensive, specialized courses. For the student interested in speech, dramatics and public speaking combined the theories of effective presentation with practical experience as the pupil exhibited his new-found skill before his classmates in monologues, demonstration speeches, and a final play. Aspiring authors enrolled in either creative writing or newswriting. Here the student gained insight into creative and factual writing methods. Future secretaries learned secrets of business success from how to punctuate a complicated sentence to how to select the proper word in secretarial English. American literature increased student knowledge of our country's heritage. With this background, the senior studied English literature more extensively. He searched for symbolism and critically analyzed what he read. An extensive grammar review was also an important part of any senior English class as the student prepared himself for the communications skill so vital in either college or the business world. Constantly expanding and initiating new methods of instruction, the department chose selected classes to work with "English 2600," an experimental program of teaching and learning, while greater acceleration and depth were introduced in many advanced English courses.

Girls Assimilate Practical Cooking Rules in West's Modern Food Laboratory

Stay stitching, French knives, cool or warm colors, and expenditures were terms familiar to girls participating in the home economics department. Four phases of the department administered the arts of homemaking. The two-year advancement programs of Foods I and II and Clothing I and II built upon and extended previous knowledge and skills. The familiarity with nutrition, menu preparation, cooking arts, and attractive service gained in Foods I served as a foundation for later laboratory work and dietary theories taught in Foods II. The first year clothing student became acquainted with the seemingly infinite number of stitches and sewing terms. Coupled with these were laboratory experiences in basic clothing construction. Clothing II extended acquired talents by application to more complicated garments and baby clothes. Family Living investigated the problems of young married couples and a day's discussion in this class might center around a smoothly run budget or a contented baby. Completing the home economics department was the second one-semester course, Home Decorating. This subject emphasized the importance of applying eye-appealing color combinations to harmonizing interior decoration.

Junior Apprentices Learn Primary Industrial Crafts From Specialized Courses

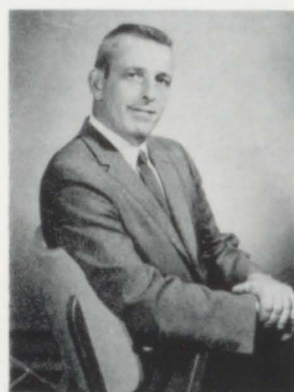

Providing future mechanics, woodcraftsmen, machinists, and architects with the tools necessary for their proper training has been the main goal of the industrial arts department. Power-driven equipment and precision machinery of all types were available to students interested in metalworking and woodworking. Those who devoted their time to auto mechanics found that the auto shop provided excellent experience; printers also had the essential devices to develop their skills. With these extraordinary facilities and a well developed program of diversified occupation in auto mechanics, machine shop, and printing, the department staff successfully prepared students for their desired vocation. Sophomores, juniors, and seniors could receive basic and specialized schooling in the growing applications of electricity, but perhaps most important was the art of drawing. Proficient use of a T square and compass was the secret to mastery of the "language of industry." From the varied courses offered by the industrial arts department, students gained a thorough understanding of the theory, design, and mechanics in manufacture and usage of industrial products. Besides the basis for careers, acquired techniques and craftsmanship furnished each participant the beginning of a pleasurable hobby and useful abilities for later life.

Miss Viola Scala
Department Chairman

Mr. Anthony Armagno

Mr. Emil Barwis

Miss Madeleine Cournoyer

Deutsche Studenten, like all others taking a foreign language, began by learning the basic concepts in the formation of new rules. The sometimes-simple alphabet usually headed this list. Counting was perhaps the next object of consideration as voices drilled eins, zwei, drei, vier . . . zweiundsiebzigtausenddreihundertvierundsechzig in front of blurring pages. Hours of effort went into memorizing new vocabularies, irregular verb endings, correct word order, and indefinite articles. En français le garçon was masculine, la jeune fille was feminine, but what was the reasoning behind la fenetre, a feminine window? For this the romantic Frenchman had no satisfactory answer. Along with infinite lists of prepositions and noun declensions in the grammatical picture were demonstrative pronouns. Is, ea, id, ejus . . ., the many words for "this" in Latin, required dedicated concentration until complete familiarity was secondhand. Good writing also required proficiency in the mechanics of punctuation, perhaps most pronounced in Spanish. ¿ Porque no nada? ¡ No nada nada porque no traje! The medal of honor for reproducing script, however, justly went to Russian students. Wading through Madame Therese, Doctor Faustus, Caesar's Gallic Wars, and Heroes of Our Time promoted better reading and translation of foreign literature while charlas improved aural comprehension and good pronunciation. Language studies which included history and geography awarded an educational view of the heritage, culture, and manners of other peoples.

Basic Number Concepts Precede Logical Thinking In Mathematics Courses

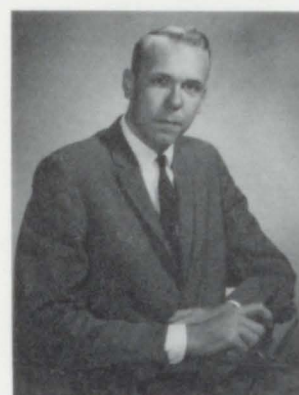

The importance of mathematics in scientific and humanistic education has made it a vital part of everyone's curriculum and a highly respected academic department. Starting with the basic idea of the number line, algebra formed the ground work for mathematics which followed arithmetic. Essential concepts of associativity, closure, and prime factors brought the picture of number structure and behavior into focus with the many systems and operations. The geometric realm of space and plane improved appreciation of the arts in daily life and of the necessity for logical reasoning. Understanding relationships of polygons and congruent triangles, drove confused minds to deduce thoughtful conclusions from postulates and theorems in infinite proofs. Trigonometry, the world of the right triangle, went beyond radian measure and fundamental identities to cologarithms and inverse functions. Advanced algebra and DeMoivre's Theorem became almost synonymous in the untangling of imaginary numbers while applying the theory of chance and the drawing of sections furnished amusing pastimes. Only a selected few analyzed end-point extrema and linear differential equations in calculus, but whether one's studies led through regular or college preparatory courses, the developed ability of rigorous thinking sent students deeper into the meaning and use of mathematics.

During the nine-hour period that the library remained open each school day, over five hundred people passed through its doors to make use of at least one of the several facilities. With a herd of students constantly flocking the book shelves, newspaper racks, and check out desk, the library and its personnel have had to accustom themselves to a rapid pace. Enlarging to meet the needs of pupil and faculty, the library increased its number of listening posts, tapes, records, and books. Microfilm took the place of old magazines to make way for the more recent periodicals. The enlarged south library fiction section and the annexion of an extra room, B-202, helped keep the library up-to-date. New assistants and slender library pages, who kept in condition by hunting for study halls and delivering slips, were employed to help with the great deal of work. Buying, processing, shelving, and repairing books were important tasks in maintaining an efficiently-run library for everyone's use.

The Students and Faculty Receive Health Care and First Aid in Nurses' Office

Miss Dolores Garramone

Miss Myrtle Gould

Toothaches, sore throats, and sprained muscles were some of the many complaints heard in the nurses' office every day school was in session. Numerous Proviso West students found the school's two nurses, Miss Myrtle Gould and Miss Dolores Garramone, adept at giving first aid and curing minor ailments. For those students requiring bed rest or a doctor's care, the nurses summoned a taxicab for transportation home. Besides caring for such emergencies, the school nurses wrote and dispatched attendance reports to the counselors for every office visitor. A complete record of every student's health history was kept on file. Yearly height and weight checks, posture tests, physical and dental examinations added many busy hours to the nurses' already crowded schedules. In addition to giving these tests, the nurses filed the results in every student's health record. They also assisted doctors in administering tuberculin tests to every freshman class member. The faculty and administration also relied upon the trusted advice and care of these women who gave a series of preventive flu shots. Together the nurses strived for a healthier student body and faculty.

Aspiring Musicians Work Their Way to Perfection With Continued Practice

A windblown third period marching session — the excitement of trying on a new choir robe — the anticipation before and then the satisfaction after a successful concert — these were moments that belonged to students of the music department. Meeting everyday, the freshmen-sophomore band through hard work and practice incited members to work towards their chance at an audition for concert band. Composed of advanced freshmen and upperclassmen, the concert band sparked enthusiasm at football and basketball games. They also added pleasure with their half-time marching and colorful majorette drills. Meeting daily during the third period, concert band members took advantage of good fall weather to develop their marching skills. As winter approached, the annual Christmas all-school assembly absorbed the concert band members' time and attention. Also preparing for the annual Christmas concert were the choir and choruses. The beautiful carols and popular and classical compositions blended talented voices that furnished enjoyable entertainment. Behind this and many other performances lay hours of vocal training. In addition to musical knowledge the choir and chorus members became acquainted with an expanded collection of songs and musical styles.

Boys' Physical Education Classes Stress Exercises, Endurance, Body Fitness

Miss Edith Jones
Department Chairman

Mr. Walter Sawosko
Department Chairman

Every year began with taking physical examinations and filling out locker cards before P. E. classes could actually get underway. Boys played touch football outside as long as they could, but once the colder fall weather finally came they moved inside for other activities. Basketball games that looked more like hockey and swimming instruction took up most of the winter months. While some were weight lifting or working out in gymnastics, others sat in hygiene and first aid classes. Wrestling matches in A-17, nine weeks in driver education, or sessions of volleyball games in the main gym were other choices of recreation. With the coming of spring and warmer weather, classes proceeded outside again and became involved in tennis, golf, softball or perhaps track and field events. Occasional intramural meets encouraged competition, but the boys who devoted a great deal of their time to athletic training were those hundreds who went out for the ten interscholastic sports for each of the three seasons. In the eight diversified semesters of physical education, the emphasis was on body care and conditioning.

Varied Physical Program Combines Athletic Skills And Practical Techniques

The whack of a tennis racket, the splash of a swimmer's stroke, the impact of a volleyball serve — these sounds announced the girls' physical education department in action. While the conditioning of a sound body remained the department's primary goal, girls also learned how to parallel park in driver education, to set a splint in first aid, and to properly care for the body in health and hygiene classes. Phases, levels, and aerial motions became part of the vocabulary of choreography and dance students. Through modern dance, bodies became more supple, limbs more graceful, and muscles more painful. Girls learned team co-operation and sportsmanship by participation in volleyball, basketball, baseball, and speedball. As tennis partners, gymnasts, swimmers, and golfers, the girls gained strength and physical proficiency. Health and restricted gym classes offered a balanced program adjustable to each participant. In these programs, girls obtained helpful knowledge of body function and structure and a sensible amount of exercise.

Laboratory, Lectures, and Projects Explain Physical and Biological Sciences

Whether creating pungent odors in the chemistry lab or enthusiastically immersing various species in preservatives, students of science plunged into nature's wonders and mysteries. Freshmen began with general science, an extensive study of the familiar phases of physical and earth science, and had the opportunity to further their knowledge by one of a series of other courses offered by the science department. In Biology I insect collections and broken microscope slides were as unavoidable as the dissections and field trips for an understanding of the chemical-physical life processes of plants and animals. Advanced work in Biology II refined basic concepts and developed a broader appreciation by research and experimentation. Rock and soil analysis illustrated earth features for geology students who probed the oldest written history of the world. Titration, oxidation, and condensation enabled junior chemists to obtain accurate data in experiments to understand the properties and forms of matter. The phenomena of electricity, light, sound, and heat provided the topics of discussion in physics classes where the language of mathematics played the important role of explaining technical theories and laws.

The social studies department presented man and his world as the history, customs, and practices of people. The United States and foreign countries were reviewed in a panoramic and analytic exposition. Ancient European civilizations, the rule of the Manchu Dynasty, and the conquests of Jose de San Martin became monuments in the past and serious points of interest for classroom instruction. With the opportunity of self-expression in debate, reports, and informal discussion, everyone could voice his opinions while probing the causes and effects of the historical facts. Movies, maps, exhibits, and lectures highlighted knowledge introduced through assigned or supplementary reading on diverse topics. The development of America since St. Augustine, the spread of communism in the Far East, and the effects of the Napoleonic Wars were no more complex than the motivating forces of the mind and the deviations from normal patterns of human behavior undertaken in psychology. Environmental factors of physical resources, climate, and distribution of animal life; economic principles of industry, trade, taxes, and banking; and political practices of local and international government fostered a firm background for interpreting current news. The social studies department, in offering the student comprehensive and stimulating courses, aided the student to discover the meaning of past and present.

Informal discussions and lectures in U.S. History class lead to interesting questions and arguments on hosts of impressionable, contemporary topics.

Business Staff Members Process and Distribute Quarterly Report Cards

Proviso West's students saw the nineteen secretaries on the business staff at work throughout the building serving various departments and running the main office. The greatest part of the business staff worked in the main office typing general correspondence, answering the phone throughout the day, and providing students, faculty, and visitors with answers to questions concerning school business. In charge of office machinery, the secretaries daily compiled absence reports and took charge of the distribution of the absence sheets and school bulletin. With the help of the IBM machines, secretaries were able to compute grades for report cards, make out class schedules, and grade tests. Running the book store, filling out transcripts, and reviewing eligibility sheets and collecting library fines, were other duties of the secretaries that kept Proviso West's business in order.

New Department Branch Serves as Special Clinic To Aid in Braille Reading

The word "braille" gained deeper meaning for Proviso students with the advent of a new clinic developed specifically for blind students as a branch of West's department of special education. Here, with the aid of braille typewriters, a growing braille library, and devoted instruction, blind students had an opportunity to explore the world of learning along with their sighted friends. The speech clinic, also a part of special education, helped those students with speaking defects and reading deficiencies. Tape recorders, charts, hours of careful study and practice culminated successfully as the student gained new abilities in verbally conveying his thought and gaining greater confidence in conversation. The average pupil, particularly those who were college-bound, also had a place in the special education program. Realizing the need for quick, yet comprehensive reading ability, the clinic encouraged students to take advantage of its speed-reading course. Using special equipment and following definite steps, the student gradually built up his reading scores, constantly spurred by frequent testing of his progress. With a staff of three, the department of special education served the individual person. Encouraging their students to rely upon themselves as well as the clinic, these educators worked for the further development of abilities and knowledge that would enable the student to better cope with his surroundings.

The success of the many school activities was partly due to the crew of twenty-seven maintenance men. They helped coaches by caring for equipment and setting up the game fields. Students who could not arrange heavy scenery or mount sixty foot ladders to pin streamers from the gym ceiling obtained assistance from the custodians, on duty around the clock. The Homecoming game left a mass of streamers and tattered decorations, but by the time of the dance the grounds were cleared for the students. After student events maintenance men took over and cleared the building for the next school day. On blustery winter mornings students and faculty arrived to snow cleared driveways and parking lots. On such mornings the men in charge of West's complex heating units successfully maintained a comfortable seventy-three degree temperature throughout the building. The appearance of the building and grounds has also been the responsibility of these men. This area of work included washing thousands of windows and cutting acres of grass. Every day after school they swept floors, dusted desks, emptied waste paper baskets and made numerous repairs necessary for a well kept building.

Hot beef sandwiches, spaghetti, banana cream pie, and hot fudge sundaes entreated appetites that calorie conscious girls fought while boys splurged with an extra turkey dinner. The twenty-six member cafeteria staff headed by their dietician Mrs. Dorothy Accardi tackled the job of satisfying the healthy appetites of West's hungry teenagers. After devising a varied menu for every day school was in session, the cafeteria staff prepared and served gallons of steaming soup, and dozens of hamburgers and hot dogs that Proviso West students consumed in addition to the forty cent hot lunches. These women also deserved much credit for preparing the eye-appealing array of pies, cakes, puddings, and jello that tempted hungry students thrived on. For many members of the staff the day ended after hundreds of place settings had been cleared and washed. These women often supervised food preparation for organizational banquets and other activities requiring cafeteria service. After the last person had gone home and the lights were out, a spotless cafeteria and kitchen remained to beckon the hordes of hungry people.

Usherettes Display Poise And Politeness at Annual Proviso West Open House

Ninety-nine representatives, the board members, and four officers met monthly while many other students enjoyed the unanticipated study time in their homerooms. In the thirty minutes that had been set aside for the "XO" period, the important plans for the Student Council were discussed and voted upon. Projects and activities designed to meet the varied interests of over three thousand students formed the programs of industrious and entertaining activity. The Council arranged, supervised, and provided the music for dancing at the end of lunch periods and after basketball games. Swimming, volleyball, ping-pong, dancing — all the recreation of smoothly run Fun Nights — could be attributed to the Student Council. The diverse services that included the Christmas Post Office and the coke machine, which was officially put into use this fall to offer a change from the usual milk to carbonated beverages, required careful consideration. This has always been the job of the Student Council Board, who met daily with President Dave Poteet and Advisor Mr. Wright. Monitors, Student Supervised Study Halls, and Assembly Supervisors operated as a few of the fourteen committees. The newly organized Usherettes, under the direction of Mrs. Horak, was also affiliated with the Student Council. Qualified girls assisted in escorting parents and students at various school functions. Other committees took charge of displays and decorations, concessions, promoting school spirit, and publicity for school events.

Student Council Proudly Awards Trophy to Class With Largest Attendance

Long before school started in the fall, the Student Council planned its schedule of activities. These forthcoming events along with those of other organizations at Proviso were published in the annual calendar which sold for fifteen cents during the first weeks of school. Among the many important dates was October 6, the Circus Homecoming. This highlight of the football season marked the beginning of the game with a rising mass of floating color as helium-filled balloons were released at the kickoff, and it ended the day with a reminiscent "Dream Under the Big Top." With the arrival of basketball, the newly organized Loyalty Committee swung into full action. Promoting attendance, it awarded a trophy at the end of the season to the class with the best percentage of loyal fans. The thirteenth of December witnessed tryouts for "Whatever Happened to Harvey Keck" which was presented by the Student Council in February. In December the mentally retarded at Dixon, Illinois, received cases of assorted soap which had been donated and collected on the eighteenth and nineteenth. Toys were collected before the West Leyden basketball game to help the U. S. Marine Corps in their annual Toys for Tots Drive. February ninth saw the success of the Valentine's Dance while the nearing of March signaled the Election Committee back to work. Freshmen elections were finger exercises compared with the chore that ended on the twenty-first when all ballots had been cast. The chronological order of main events, however, told only part of the involved story of Student Council service to the school and community. The affairs of the Council technically started on September seventh and finished on the fourteenth of June during which time they were devoted to the improvement of the school functions and betterment of student activity.

A Flurry of Fashion Sets Pace for Busy Schedule of Girls League Activities

An active membership in Girls League meant much more than enjoying refreshments and conversation at the yearly parties. Led by four elected officers and a cabinet, League members spent many hours preparing successful charity and entertainment projects. Carrying on a three-year-old tradition, the girls gathered, folded, and packed clothing bundles for Chicago area Indians. The girls volunteered many afternoons for tying red, yellow, green, and blue ribbons which they sold during the annual Bow Week. The profits from this project went to an elected charity. Heading the calendar of social events was the annual fall fashion show in September. Parents were included when the league members honored their mothers at the traditional spring banquet, and escorted their fathers to the Dad-Daughter Date Night. Outstanding among the social events was the annual sock-hop — a tradition of West's Girls League.

'62-'63 Convention Theme Demands Key Clubbers to Meet Freedom's Challenge

As one of the two thousand five hundred Key Clubs throughout the United States, Canada, and Mexico, the Proviso West Key Club promoted the goals and objectives of an international organization. In addition to the standing aims of Key Club, the theme "Fulfill Freedom's Challenge" was adopted at the Nineteenth Annual Convention for the year of 1962-63. The basic ideals of Key Clubbing are based on those of Kiwanis, their founding institution. Under the sponsorship of the Westchester Kiwanis Club and with the direction of faculty advisors Mr. DeHaven and Mr. Waters, the club continued its policy of service to the school and community begun in 1958. Their projects have included Derby Day, co-sponsorship of a "dress right" campaign, coat checking for a host of school activities, the Christmas assembly skit, support of the post office, and basketball tournament concessions. During the fall, Key Clubbers helped wheel patients of the Westlake Memorial Hospital to chapel for three consecutive Sundays. Money brought in from the bi-annual car washes and other fund raising enterprises has been donated to charities. The thirty-nine members of the Key Club, which represent the upper classes, have been carefully selected for character and have worked as a group for development of initiative, leadership, and citizenship.

"West on Exhibit" Strives To Portray the Activities Of Proviso Student Body

Utilizing a new office in room C-313 to its fullest extent were twelve Mural editors and twelve staff members. Under the supervision of their advisor, Mrs. Carol DeRuiter, the staff worked diligently to artistically capture all the happenings of the 1963 school year. Track meets, the senior prom, final exams, crowded buses, and the Christmas assembly contributed animated faces, all part of school life covered in the Mural. Room C-321 served as headquarters for business transactions. The business manager and her advisor Mrs. Wilma Dombrowski tackled endless tasks connected with ordering forms, bookkeeping records, and budgets involved in yearbook production. Through working on a publication, staff members learned the importance of teamwork, co-operation, as well as basic yearbook terminology. By the end of the year, copy was an all too familiar word, and everyone used bleed, layout, and crop as second nature. The staff felt no greater pride than when their year-old project, straight from the press, was in print before their eyes.

Thirty-Six Page Christmas Issue Establishes Record

Under the supervision of Mr. Arthur Levin, the Profile staff worked constantly to publish Proviso's weekly newspaper. Reporters heard the all too familiar cry of the managing editors assigning stories. Editors attempted to read copy and suggest correction for rewriting. Secretaries struggled to get the finished copy typed in order to be sent to the printer. It was a common sight to see the lights burning in D-112, the Profile office, long after school was dismissed as the staff endeavored to meet their deadline. The usual eight page edition was sometimes supplemented throughout the year by additional sections. Arduous work was needed to publish the record-setting thirty-six page

Christmas edition and other special editions such as the Education, Brotherhood, College, and Traffic Safety issues. Each Thursday during the seventh period, Mr. Philip Pilgrim along with his staff rushed to make sure that each student received a Profile. The staff took time out from their busy schedules for their Christmas party and annual pot-luck dinner. The dinner was climaxed by the appointment of a new editorial board and by the awarding of Quill and Scroll pins to qualified members. The new board finished the season by organizing the final edition of the Profile under the guidance of the experienced senior staff members.

Pages Aid in Maintaining The Efficiency of Newly Enlarged Proviso Library

Pages gained experience and knowledge about library organization while assisting West's four librarians. Mending, filming, and shelving books were just a few of the many tasks which the pages performed daily. Some pages worked before and after school checking out books and magazines or playing tapes and records. Other members forfeited either their hour or half-hour study halls in order to work in the library. In addition, students working in the library office mended and lettered books or helped type cards for books, magazines, and pamphlets. Daily routines included collecting library passes and delivering them at the beginning of each period to study halls. The librarians and secretaries maintained the operation of Proviso's large library with its new extension with the assistance proffered by the pages.

Debate Teams Travel to WBKB Televisión Studios To Appear on "Rebuttal"

Proviso West's three debate teams, varsity, junior-varsity, and novice, worked toward school honor and recognition. Under the sponsorship of Mr. Paul Johnson, the debaters spent hours gathering facts and figures for future debates and developing their speaking abilities. To further their experience in competitive speaking, members also traveled to Northwestern, Augustana, and Normal Universities. Starting as novice debaters in the freshmen year, beginning members studied the basic forms and procedures. Junior-varsity debaters gained additional skills through extensive practice while the varsity debaters represented our school at important contests with other schools. Discussing labor unions, the varsity team appeared on the television program "Rebuttal." Debaters also spent enjoyable and profitable time at summer institutes learning analytical reasoning and debate techniques. Trophies and acknowledgements at state and national contests represented the diligent work and acquired abilities of Proviso's debaters.

National Forensic League Speakers Compile Points At Interscholastic Events

Equipped with winning monologues, orations, dramatic interpretations, and debate arguments, West's speakers compiled points that made them eligible to join the National Forensic League. NFL members carefully considered the qualifications of a candidate before admitting him to membership. Gathering at their annual spring banquet, National Forensic League members honored their outstanding speakers and debaters and made plans for participation in summer debate and speech seminars. Competing in interscholastic events, NFL members traveled to such schools as Rich Township, East Peoria, and Thornton Fractional displaying their skills. With the help of their sponsor, Mr. Paul Johnson, members aided one another through objective criticism and learned to work not as individuals but as a unified team.

FNA Member Explores Personal and Professional Aspects of Nurses' Life

Each year the Future Nurses of America, better known as the White Caps, participated in many activities. This fall the members traveled to Illinois Research Hospital for a tour and open house. With the holiday season came their annual Christmas party, at which the graduate FNA members were guests of honor. With the help of sponsors Miss Dolores Garramone and Miss Myrtle Gould, programs were planned to feature speakers interested in public nursing, volunteer work, or hospital nursing schools. These meetings were held during XO periods. The year was climaxed with an annual tea and fashion show for members, their mothers, and friends.

FTA Concentrates Its Activities on Future Careers

Encouraging and preparing interested students to enter a career in teaching has been the primary purpose of the Future Teachers of America. Striving to be physically, mentally, and morally able as future teachers, members made pledges at the beginning of the year and then fulfilled them to the best of their capacity. Under the supervision of the co-sponsors Miss Viola Scala and Mr. Ewing Small, the FTA held meetings each month after school. The business activities of the club consisted of various lectures on recruitment, college scholarship discussions, and election of officers. To climax the program of the FTA, the future teachers of West served as host to all other FTA girls in the West Suburban schools for the Delta Kappa Gamma Educational Fraternity. Entertainment has made up another phase of the organization's well-rounded activities. Members enjoyed both a Halloween and a Christmas party and educational travelogues by Mrs. Horak and Miss Garramone. An installation and bon voyage to seniors, entitled "Sayonare," acquainted new officers with positions and concluded the year.

FBLA Sponsors Alumni Coke Hour at Homecoming

Students planning a commercial career found a rewarding education in their membership in the Proviso West Chapter of Future Business Leaders of America. Monthly meetings were the integral part in broadening business appreciation and experience. An active program was designed to stimulate interest in the competitive business world and to introduce the available types of employment with their necessary requirements. The first of the activities sponsored by the club was the Alumni Coke Hour at Homecoming. October 20, saw twenty-six members attend the Northern Area

Conference at Northern Illinois University in DeKalb, Illinois. Plans for 1963 were formulated when officers and sponsors, Mr. John Wadsworth, Mrs. Joan Diedrich, Mr. Dewey Adair, and Miss Theresa Lovasich met in December. Representatives attended the State Convention in Springfield, Illinois, where they elected new officers for the coming year. The members also maintained the successful operation of the school store. Through this and their other functions, the club offered typical business surroundings that would strengthen and produce the ideal "Future Business Leader."

Under the supervision of Mr. Richard Becker and Mr. Larry Stilwell, the Chess Club gained a new standing of recognition. Throughout the academic year, the Proviso West team sought to prove itself in competition with clubs from other schools. In order to improve its strategic skills, eleven additional chess sets were purchased from student funds and club dues. The club also branched out into a general strategy department. With the help of Mr. Larry Stilwell, the strategy department theoretically studied and reenacted military campaigns on realistic maps. One of the campaigns involved the complete reenactment of World War I. This game was six months in the making, measured four and one half feet by nine feet, and took a week to play. Other games of this kind consist of the reenactment of D-Day and Civil War battles. In such games, chess members increased their power of concentration and gained practical historical knowledge in an enjoyable and novel manner.

Exhibits, Tours, and Fair Activate the Interests of West's Science Members

Prompted to further experience and understand the scientific mysteries about them, interested and ambitious students joined to form the Science Club. With basic knowledge from their normal and, in some cases advanced courses, members continued their research and experimentation beyond class hours. Under the sponsorship of Mr. John Slimmer and Mr. William Haas, each undertook work on a special project. Projects were to be entered in competition at the Science Fair of the Illinois Junior Academy. Helping each other in their efforts, the activity of the club increased as the Science Fair neared. Proviso's annually sponsored PTA Science Fair gave them the chance to display their involved exhibits. As a group they have gone on tours of American Can Company, Argon Laboratories, and Automatic Electric. At monthly meetings they viewed movies pertaining to their particular fields of interest and discussed topics related to specific areas of science.

The Proviso West Radio Club has been organized to help interested students to understand the principles of radio communication. At this year's weekly meetings the club's officers have taught new members the fundamentals of radio operation and code transmitting. Work is carried on to assist beginners to receive their amateur radio license and have stations. The school radio station, W9BX, has been located on the first floor of building B. It was operated through the efforts of the members and the club sponsor, Dr. D. B. Appleton. New additions to the school station included an antenna and a more powerful transmitting unit. The equipment and supervision gave readily available experience to students in a growing field of electronics.

Major, Minor Lettermen And Numeralmen Serve School in Red and White

Performing well on the field, in the pool, and on the court, Proviso West athletes also assumed significant school services as a collect group. The Major and Minor Lettermen and the Numeralmen cooperated to host and help with various tasks at sports events. They worked together on necessary occasions sponsoring an annual school dance, the Junior-Senior and Faculty-Senior basketball games. Each athlete and manager had the opportunity to join one of the organizations as the recipient of a major or minor letter or numerals. Identified by their red and white sweaters, lettermen held the ropes at all basketball games and took part in the sales of season passes and programs. The lettermen maintained the status of worthy representatives of Proviso West to the Interim League while they strove to promote enthusiasm and interest in intramural competition.

Cheerleaders Drill in Anticipation of Spirited Crowd

The Varsity and Junior Varsity Cheerleaders composed the Cheerleaders' Organization. Their primary function has been the promotion of active participation at sports contests. The cheerleaders accomplished this aim by leading organized cheering at games, by helping plan and carry out pep assemblies, and by general fostering of school loyalty. They sold season passes for the Holiday Basketball Tournament in December. The cheerleaders spent Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons in B-2 exercising, practicing old cheers, and learning the motions for new ones. During the past summers, part of the squad attended a cheerleading camp where they received instruction and participated in competitive events. West's representatives were awarded the second place trophy for neatness, sportsmanship, leadership, and spirit. They also came home with a first place ribbon for their pep assembly skit and fight cheer and a third place ribbon for an original rhythm cheer won in competition with 30 squads.

Racket Squad's Cheering Supports Spirit at Home And Away Sports Events

With the first week of school the Racket Squad began a job that did not end until the final game of the basketball season. The Racket Squad Board and its members organized pep assemblies, made posters, and sold shakeroos. They arranged for student transportation to all away games and were responsible for the distribution of bus passes. Members sat in a designated area enclosed with rope and marked "loud mouths only!" They originated the tradition of the bleacher shaking "Let's Go," and adopted the hoop-smashing entrance of the team. Loyal members attended football and basketball games to give supporting and encouraging cheers. Racket Squad worked together with the Student Council Loyalty Committee for the promotion of better school spirit. At the end of each of the two seasons, faithful members were awarded attendance pins for their active participation.

'Fun and Fizz' Introduces Girls Athletic Association Newcomers to Fall Sports

Supervised by Mrs. Marilyn McBride, the Girls' Athletic Association offered a wide-ranged program developing every aspect of physical interest. Trained leaders supervised sports including tennis, volleyball, swimming, and fencing, offering advice to the advanced player or providing basic instruction for the novice. GAA social activities included a September "Fun and Fizz," a Christmas party, and a spring picnic. A fast moving Dad-Daughter Date Night and outdoor Mother-Daughter tea entertained parents. The presentation of awards ranging from a twenty-four point pin to an Illinois State numeral climaxed a year of conditioning activities.

December "Water Week" Features Panther Relays

Dedicated to the student body, the grade school children, and the adults of the district, the Aquatic Staff functioned as a service organization providing swim programs for participants of all ages. The Staff trained members to serve as lifeguards and to serve during the Saturday swim program for elementary school children. In addition instruction for both adults and children was given during summer swim classes. Four all-school swims held after school and a Water Week featuring swimming relays and walking aquatic staff members made up the year's agenda. Another phase of Aquatic Staff activity consisted of appointing members to work as lifeguards at Fun Nights, to officiate at interscholastic swim meets, and to sell concessions. A picnic and splash party in the late spring terminated the aquatic events.

Water Show Climaxes Marinette Aquatic Activities

Focusing all their work, effort, and time in order to organize and perfect an exclusive Water Show, members of the Marinettes spent hours practicing various under-water numbers. Building up to this musically graceful production, participating swimmers worked hard all year. Near the beginning of the school year, any students who were interested in synchronized swimming were invited to join. Mrs. Jacqueline Pracko taught the girls swim techniques and artistic execution of water ballets. During the balance of the year, members broke up into groups and drilled on chosen numbers which were to be seen in the Water Show performances. Groups of two to eight girls rehearsed twice a week, while extra time was spent designing and making their own costumes for the show. The essence of the Marinettes' long and tedious preparations finally paid off in a water show centered around the idea of an aquatic travelogue.

Girls in Orchesis Fashion Original Dance Costumes For Spring Dance Show

Orchesis, the official dance club of Proviso West, met for one hour on Tuesday and Thursday of each week. During these work periods, time was provided to do the choreography for special dances requested for clubs, organizations, programs and other activities. The main purpose of Orchesis has been to supply time, space, work, and supervision for girls who are interested in modern dance. The club served as a clearing house for dance talent in the school while it furnished a special type of individual recreation. Mrs. Mildred Katz, the club's advisor, arranged a well-scheduled program. Between 3:15 and 4:15 on their meeting days, girls practiced and mastered dance routines that aided self-improvement. Participants in Orchesis could earn points for the Girls' Athletic Association as they learned to appreciate dance through self-expression.

The members of the Cine Club maintained and operated the professional audio-visual equipment of the school. The club acted as a service organization giving time to aid classes and other organizations with audio or visual presentations. Members helped sell football programs and often checked coats at Fun Nights. Club rules required a 3.5 grade average of its constituents, who were constantly tested on their ability to run and repair the great variety of facilities. On Thursday, December 13, the Cine Club held its third annual Christmas Party in the teachers' cafeteria. Cine Letters were earned through a point system for regular and extra assignments and were awarded at the Farewell Party in May. As part of the National Audio-Visual Association, the group visited exhibits and toured projector factories in the summer.

Members of Travel Club Advance Friendships by Pen-Pal Correspondence

Promoting the aspects of travel and gaining knowledge of people in all nations of the world was the primary purpose which the Travel Club sought to achieve throughout the year. Under the supervision of Mrs. Martha Wilson, members explored the scenery and cultures of foreign as well as neighboring lands. Exchange students from Germany, Switzerland, Italy, and other overseas countries talked monthly with travel members. Veins of conversation ranged from vacation possibilities to dating customs. In order to insure their friendly relationship with other countries, members also wrote to pen-pals and kept in constant correspondence with them. Regular films and slides of National Parks depicted scenic terrain. All the activities of the club helped to build adult citizens able to work towards a more peaceful world.

Boys' Chorus Explores The Various Techniques Of Choral Vocalization

Attired in uniforms, a boys' ensemble rehearses for choral presentation.

Interested young men who had a desire to sing met three times a week to develop their musical abilities. The fifty-eight members of the Boys' Chorus worked diligently to learn the fundamentals of choral singing. Applying these basic essentials under the direction of Mr. Irwin Bell, members sang a variety of vocal arrangements throughout the year. After months of practicing, the chorus performed at Proviso East in a Christmas Concert in December. After this experience, the boys analyzed their singing and rehearsed for five more months. At the end of this time, the chorus performed again at Proviso East in the Spring Concert which was held in May. This vocal training gave the boys an excellent opportunity to further their talents.

Girls' Chorus Entertains Student Body at Assemblies

One-hundred fifty sophomores, juniors, and seniors gained additional vocal training in the Advanced Girls' Chorus. The girls qualified by participation in Freshman Girls' Chorus or by acceptance at the spring tryouts. Participation in the Christmas Choral Concert culminated weeks of enthusiastic practice, and the spring concert in May offered the girls a chance to display skills gained in tri-weekly classes held the previous eight months. Advanced Girls' Chorus members showing outstanding vocal gifts were given individualized training for solo work. The twelve voice Girls' Chorus Ensemble composed of talented chorus singers performed for special school programs and traveled to other schools representing West in community programs. This twelve member group ended the year by participating in the annual state music contest in May. The interest acquired spurred many girls on to further training in West's Choir.

For one hundred and fifty freshmen girls, participation in a high school extra-curricular activity began in the spring of their eighth grade, with tryouts for West's Freshmen Girls' Chorus. Throughout the year, these girls improved their vocal diction and tone reproduction in bi-weekly and tri-weekly classes. They also studied the elements of musical interpretation as well as individual and group vocal training. Their study and techniques culminated in the Freshmen Girls' Chorus participation in the Christmas concert and later in the spring choral concert. Singing under the direction of Mr. Irwin Bell, chorus members looked forward to more advanced study and vocal experimentations in either the Advanced Girls' Chorus or the Choir.

Consisting of both male and female vocalists, the Proviso West Choir presented the school's best choral singers. Before becoming a member, a prospective student had to first prove himself by participating in one of the three other choruses. After ascertaining eligibility, the choir offered many more activities and opportunities to perform. Male quartets, mixed ensembles, and soloists were a few of the extra groups associated with the choir. In addition talented members performed as dancers or Christmas carolers who were attired in eye-catching costumes. Some of the Choir's musical entertainment consisted of a Christmas Concert in December and a Spring Concert in May. Both concerts were presented at Proviso East, featuring the combined vocalization of the Freshmen Girls', Advanced Girls' and Boys' Choruses along with the Choir. In the late fall, the student body of Proviso was given another chance to listen to the excellent quality of the Choir on WIND radio. The ninety-one member choral group was enthusiastically received during the evening broadcast. Other scheduled programs at churches and clubs delighted hundreds of adults and children in nearby communities. Climaxing a year of vocalizing, members of the choir entered the State Music Contest in March and won several awards.

Orchestra Performs With Harmonious Quality at Fall and Spring Concerts

The melodious harmony of the orchestra was attributed to a select number of wind, string, and percussion instruments. Assembled to give a symphonic quality to musical compositions, members practiced daily under the direction of Mr. James Leinhard. In order to please the taste of its audience, the orchestra's program at each of its performances was comprised of both classical and popular selections. Throughout the year, the orchestra played for various school functions and meetings, entertaining students as well as their parents. Performances were given at faculty teas, PTA meetings, and the annual Spring Concert. After a year's practicing, selected musicians participated in the State Solo-Ensemble Concert and Interim Association Musical Festival.

Band Escorts Enhance Games with Color, Dignity

Rehearsing every day during the third period, Proviso's twirling majorettes arranged their own routines for performances at school functions and sports events. In addition to practicing all week, the girls received professional lessons every Thursday. Designing and making their colorful uniforms occupied the rest of their extra time. The majorettes' activities consisted primarily of accompanying the concert band at its musical performances. Medals representing each baton member's ability were awarded at the State contest.

The Proviso West Color Guard's main function was to serve as flag bearer for the Proviso West Band and on occasion, as a representative of the band. At the freshmen day assembly, Lincoln assembly, elections assembly, and other similar functions, the four members of the color guard presented the colors in the dignified manner which is assimilated with the presentation of our American Flag. Affiliated with the concert band, the color guard additionally served as flag bearer at band concerts in February and in April.

Band Plays Arrangement Of "Songs of the South" In Honor of Abe Lincoln

An eighty-four member Concert Band met every day during the third period under the command direction of Mr. Carroll Simmons. The band had the opportunity to demonstrate their musical talents at the major concerts in February and April. Other performances included a Mall concert, an occasional presentation for the Parent-Teachers Association, graduation and class night. In addition to its individual appearances, the Band was featured with the Choir in an all-school assembly presenting seasonal arrangement of well known compositions. Besides supplementing athletic events, the Band played at pep assemblies, during half times of varsity football games and at the Gymnastic Extravaganza. Giving select members a chance to display their skills, soloists and ensemble groups were often asked to entertain at civic functions in nearby communities. State contests also gave qualified members the opportunity to represent the school in difficult competition.

Wind Instruments — Sax, Flute, Trumpet — Blend Their Vivid Individuality

The Freshmen-Sophomore bands included a frosh-soph A band, a frosh-soph B band, and an instrumental class. The frosh-soph A and B bands consisted of under-classmen trained on a particular band instrument while the instrumental class consisted of students having had less previous musical background. Altogether comprising approximately ninety members, the three groups practiced five days a week under the direction of Mr. Carroll Simmons. Activities of the bands and instrumental class consisted of home-basketball games and pep assemblies. During the months of February and April, the two bands and instrumental class performed as a combined group at two concerts held in the Proviso East auditorium. Separate instrumental ensembles were also given an opportunity to display their abilities at these respective concerts. After a year of intensive training, qualified band members were promoted to the concert band. A number of musicians were also awarded partial scholarships to the University of Wisconsin summer music camp.

Candlelight Induction Forms National Honor Chapter

As the symbolic light of the keystone passed from one candle to the next, new members officially accepted the standards set forth by the National Honor Society. This, the third group to comprise the Proviso West Chapter, was inducted by Mr. John Slimmer in the presence of friends and relatives. Each student had earned his position through three years of academic and extra curricular success. The high standards of the society included requirements of grade average and teacher recommendation that selected the top section of the Senior Class. Now having pledged themselves to uphold the ideals of good character, leadership, scholarship, and service, the recipients became part of an honorary society of national secondary schools. The company retired from the Little Theatre to the cafeteria for a banquet enriched by the music of a string quartet. Cordial addresses by Dr. Barton, Mr. Logelin, and Dr. Johnson concluded the impressive ritual of Wednesday night, October seven. The relatively short time between 6:30 and 9:30 had represented and awarded the achievement of diligence and dedication.

Players Vote Wittersheim Most Valuable; Complete Season with 5-2-1 Record

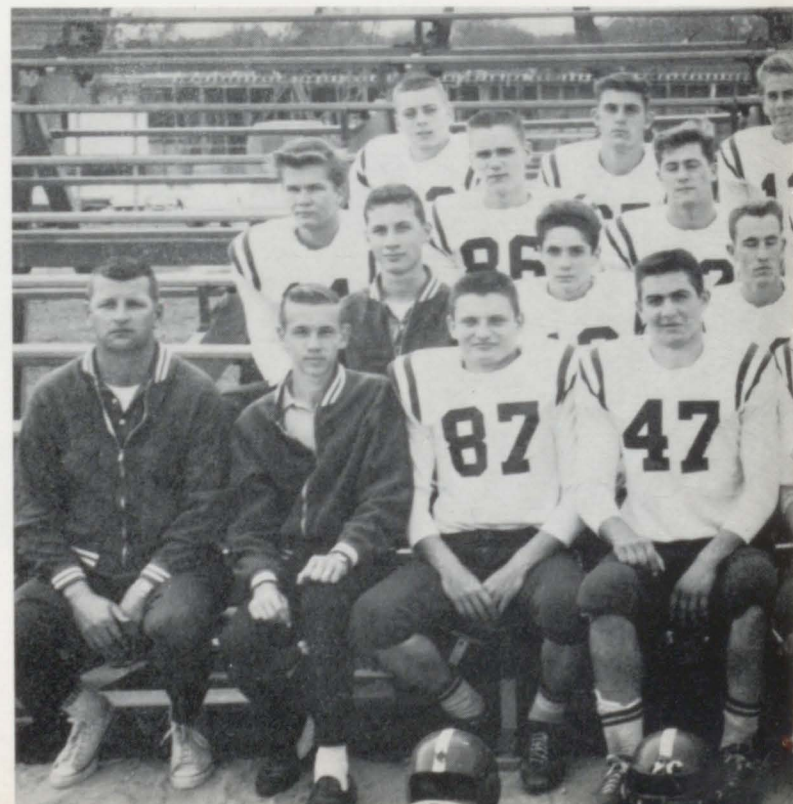

Although the varsity gridmen posted a commendable 5-2-1 overall record, this was only fifth place in a much improved Interim League. Most Valuable Senior Jim Wittersheim, one of the strongest rushing backs in the league, was honored by being named to the All-Conference Team. Two other players, End Chuck Keller and Guard Ken Klingberg, also received All-Conference honors. The season was a study of close contests with only two games being decided by more than seven points. The Cats opened action at Elgin, where the Panthers dedicated a new stadium with a 27-0 victory. The slate centered around the homecoming game, in which the entire team played excellent football while defeating the Morton West Falcons, 6-2. The gridders rolled up their highest total of the year in the season's finale at Glenbard East when Dave Spencer scored three touchdowns in a 34-32 triumph. The junior varsity played fine football but were plagued by the loss of many juniors who graduated to the varsity. Thus, they compiled a 2-5-1 record. The sophomores lost three games by wide margins, but still they closed the season with an improved 5-3 record. The freshman teams met with mixed fates with Bernie Skul's "A" squad posting 2-4-2 and George Benaris's "B"s having an excellent 5-2-1.

Rabbit-Chasers Vanquish League Foes to Capture Third Conference Crown

For the third time in four years of varsity competition, the Panther varsity cross country squad under Coach Joe Hartley finished the season on top of the Interim League. Led by junior Jim Letterer, the harriers copped seven of eight league meets and took first place in the league meet at Glenbard East. Closing the season, the Cats finished in sixth place in the LaGrange district. Because of his fine running throughout the entire season, Chuck Bertoncini was named the Most Valuable Senior. Although both the varsity and sophomore teams had identical 8-3 records, the sophomores could only place third in the league because of a poor showing in the conference meet. Coach Carter stated that it was diligence and hard work that brought the team success.

Bob Goodpasture puts forth all out effort in victory over Glenbard.

Swimmers Drown Foes While Stroking Toward Interim Conference Title

The Proviso West varsity mermen, under Coach Walt Cryer, came up with one of the best performances in the school's history as they finished the season on top of the Interim League. The wetbacks met defeat only once during the season, a 73-22 setback at the hands of mighty Hinsdale. During the season, every school record in the books except one was broken or tied. Junior distance swimmer Paul Kobierski broke records in the 200- and 400-yard freestyle. Sprinter Frank Novak, another junior, established the standard in the 50-yard freestyle. For his excellence throughout the season, Clark Van Cleave was chosen as the Most Valuable Senior. The Cats took first place in the Panther Relays and first in the Riverside-Brookfield Invitations, upsetting both R-B and Proviso East. After copping the Interim League Meet at Niles West, the Panthers finished second to highly ranked Evanston and qualified three individuals and two relay teams for the state finals. In the finals, both the 200-yard freestyle relay team of Doug Reagan, Wayne Stevenson, Clark Van Cleave, and Frank Novak, and the 200-yard medley relay team of Reagan, Russ Martindale, Ken Shaw and Novak placed sixth in the state out of ninety-eight schools. These finishes gave Proviso the right to be called the eighth best swim team in the state of Illinois. Meanwhile, on the sophomore and freshmen levels, Coach Vern Wilhelm's sophs added a second place finish in the League Meet to a fine won-lost record and finished second over-all, and Coach Larry Stillwell's freshmen placed fourth among twenty-six teams in the Hinsdale Freshman Invitational.

Cagers Claim Title of Best Yet at West After Posting of 9-12 Record

The basketball fortunes of Proviso West have finally taken a turn for the better. After winning only twelve games in three years of varsity competition, the Panthers nine victories represent the greatest victory total in the history of Proviso West. The Panthers defeated Carl Sandburg on Thanksgiving Eve, marking the first time in four years that the season was opened with a victory. The Cats played above average basketball through December and had a 5-3 record at the beginning of the Christmas layoff. Then, disaster struck in the form of the Proviso West Christmas Holiday Tournament in which the Panthers dropped games to Downers Grove and Maine East. The team played average basketball the second half of the season and finished the season with a 9-12 overall record. Chuck Simons, the Panther's scrappy junior guard, was elected to the Interim League All-Conference Team and John Hobart, also a junior, received Honorable Mention rating. In individual scoring, Chuck Simons finished high with 301 points on the season. Les Worcester was also selected as the most valuable senior. On the other levels, basketball was reminiscent of the old Proviso West style. The junior varsity, hampered by the loss of four juniors to the varsity, found it difficult to win, as did the sophomores, who lost three boys to the JV's. Both freshmen teams compiled fair records under capable leadership.

John Hobart "guns" for two from the side.

Les Mosher tries working himself clear for a shot.

The highlight of the basketball season was the Riverside-Brookfield Regional Tournament where Proviso West met the neighboring Proviso East Pirates. As expected, the Pirates won this contest, but not without a valiant struggle by the West team. For three quarters, the Panthers held the Bucs in check, but much superior manpower began to show through in the final quarter, when East jumped ahead to stay. In spite of this 46-35 loss, the Panthers, led by the shooting of Chuck Simons and the rebounding of Les Worcester and Mike O'Fallon, presented a good showing and should be a credit to Proviso West. Coach Hartley deserves credit for building the boys up to a peak by his practice and conditioning methods, and the team deserves credit for playing to the best of their ability.

Al Lipper Places Third In State Wrestling Meet, Chosen as Most Valuable

This year's wrestling season highlighted the individual wrestlers. Al Lipper earned the title of the third best wrestler in the state of Illinois in the 145-pound class by passing through the district and sectional meets without defeat and finally being beaten in the semi-final round at Champaign. During the season, the grapplers compiled an 8-9 record, coupled that with a third place finish in the Rich East Wrestling Tournament, and finished seventh in the Interim League. Two other wrestlers qualified in district competition and moved into the sectionals along with Lipper. Jerry Nyckel, a junior 127-pound wrestler took second place in the district and third in the sectionals and Doug Whitfield, a senior at 133 pounds placed second in district competition. Al Lipper, by virtue of his trip to Champaign, was named the Most Valuable Senior Wrestler of the 1962-63 season. Coach Eric Yaeger, the varsity grappling mentor, stated that the boys could have had a better record if they had not been plagued by injuries. The underclassmen, under Coaches Ron Singer, Leo McClard, and Gale Dawson, posted fair seasons.

Gymnastics Squad Built Through Long Practice Surprises Most Experts

Having only four seniors to work with this year, Coach Jeff Austin had to build the bulk of his team around a capable group of sophomores and juniors. The gymnasts started the season slowly, losing their first two meets. The rest of the season was the exact opposite as the musclemen won thirteen of their last sixteen meets; however, two of these losses were to Prospect and Willowbrook, the 1-2 finishers in the league. The gymnasts also placed third in the conference meet behind Prospect and Willowbrook, thus ending the season in third place. The Cats came alive during state competition as they qualified three boys for the state finals held at York. Sophomore John Haller gained the right to participate in the state finals in the parallel bars; Mike Jacki qualified in all-around, parallel bars, and rings; Hutch Dvorak made the finals on the trampoline. In the finals, Dvorak and Jacki came through in fine style. Dvorak, the Most Valuable Senior Gymnast, placed third in the state in the trampoline.

With five returning lettermen and a nucleus of strong juniors and seniors, the varsity golf team went "all the way" this year. The team bettered last year's 9-4 record because of the fact that only one man of last year's top five graduated. This year's team was paced by seniors Wayne Galman, Les Horne, and Jim McMahon and juniors Don Damm and George Casino. The toughest varsity competition came from Wheaton and Maine West, two top contenders for the Interim League crown. The golfers also had a rough competition with Hinsdale, last year's state champ, in this year's state meet. For the last three years, Coach Bill Heald has concentrated on building a good golf team through long and strenuous hours on the course. The golfers were seen touring the links every night after school, rain or shine.

Trackmen Outscore All Opposition, Place First At League Indoor Meet

Showing their perennial prowess in track and field, the Panthers took first place in the Interim League indoor meet held at Morton West. Bill Watters heaved the shot fifty-five feet, six inches to win a first in his specialty. Jim Letterer, a junior miler, placed first in his event. The mile relay team outran all opposition by winning in 3:39.2. In the West Suburban track meet, Watters and Letterer placed first in their specialties. This year, the Cats appeared strong in the mile, half-mile, 440 yard run, polevault, mile relay, and shot-put. The mile-relay team turned in one of the best times in the state this year. The sophomores, led by Craig Grant and freshman Ed Katz, had a fine season.

Runners clear hurdles in deserted section of A-building after school.

Bill Watters and Ed Viktor heft the shot, preparing for indoor meet.

With eyes forward, Ron Gummerson, John Ullinskey, Mike Horyn, and Rich Wesolek await the starting gun.

After a poor eighth place finish in the Interim League last season, this year's varsity squad, studded with returning lettermen, were one of the top teams in the league. Varsity head coach Ed Gilbert placed a heavy emphasis on the pitching staff headed by All-Conference hurler, Jim Wittersheim. Backing up Wittersheim on the mound were Ron Weiford, Frank Tabor, Bob Skurkauskis, Joe Gange, Kurt Bloeser, and Ken Erdmann. The Cats had an extremely strong and experienced infield with Ray Jewell at first base, Steve Davis at second, Chuck Simons at shortstop, and Bob Cihlar holding down third base. The outfield was bolstered by the presence of John Puglise and Ted Zalewski. Dave Kouba and Frank Yaccino shared the catching duties. Coach Gilbert stated that the starting lineup was better than average, but the team was hurt by lack of depth in infield and outfield positions. The first encounter on the diamond was against Hinsdale on April 2. Coach Gilbert's charges took the field hoping for the start of a season-long winning streak.

Tennis Outlook Brightens With Fine Results From Primarily Junior Squad

The varsity tennis squad, under the capable leadership of Coach John Wadsworth, were handicapped this year by the lack of experience. Four juniors comprised the first four men on the squad: Bob Wager, Ed Jennings, Lee Mayer, and John Cionca. These boys will provide building blocks for next year's squad, but this year were still engrossed in learning and gaining experience. Coach Wadsworth felt that the netmen had a fair chance of extricating themselves from the depths of the Interim League's second division. However, he viewed the possibility with optimism. For the team to advance to the upper echelon of the league, it must have had two or three outstanding players. The material was available, but time was necessary for full development. Optimistically, the racketmen took the court against York.

Senior Gary Heitsch sets himself while preparing to drop one over net.

With a mixture of excitement and pride, the class of 1963 returned to complete the last lap of their four-year round. "Aloha West" opened the year of parties and dances without a hint of the concerns that were to come. Re-adjusting to pretzel sticks and marshmallow sundaes as part of a well-educated diet came in the same stride with remembering how to unscramble complicated trigonometry problems. Over-stuffed lockers and after school committee meetings furnished two excuses explaining frequent one o'clock bedtimes. School days went right along with growing activity interests in everything from variety show tryouts to track practices. The delivery of senior class rings outwardly labeled the group of upperclassmen. The feeling of gradual anticipation began even before the measuring for caps and gowns in English class. Selection of the class motto, colors, and gift coincided with choosing between 3x5 and 4x6 note cards for a slow-moving research paper. Fun Nights, Dress-up Days, and Coke Hours managed to balance the calendar with strenuous hours of library work and infamous college board examinations. Waiting in line for a reserved book on Chaucer's Canterbury Tales or rushing through the hall at 3:30 on a Friday afternoon, the senior lived to the fullest every moment of his last year at Proviso West.

Crepe paper, wood, and wire cluttered the garage in which the spirited juniors built their homecoming float. Exhibiting their enthusiasm even further, President Denny Likosar accepted the trophy copped by the class of '64 for maintaining highest attendance at the home basketball games. Strong junior swimmers drowned the seniors in the traditional junior-senior swim meet. Adding to their list of accomplishments, the juniors overwhelmingly defeated the seniors and faculty at the annual basketball games. Junior social calendars were filled with such events as the fall dance "Rhapsody in Blue" and the February coke hour "From a Cherry Tree to a Rocking Chair." Yet social life was second place next to advanced algebra problems, American literature essays, and public speaking outlines which consumed many hours of study time. With this work, however, came the quiet pride in ordering class rings and filling out next year's course studies on senior program cards.

Filing away their Redbooks and exchanging hour for thirty minute counseling classes, the sophomores returned to West with the casual superiority of middleclassmen. The social life of second year students almost equalled the academic challenges confronting them. Taking time out from a biology class work dissection or an investigation of Brutus' motivations, sophomores enjoyed their class parties, "Jack O'Lantern Jam" and "The Birthday." The class of '65 celebrated their first school dance swinging at "Tropical Twilight." Another new experience was driver training which catered to sophomore class members. Driver education teachers gritted their teeth and grinned as new drivers put theory into practice behind the wheel. Both boys and girls strived for athletic and academic honors. Bronze medal winners accumulated seals for a possible silver or gold pin while sophomore team boys worked to improve skills to gain berths on prided Junior Varsity teams. As proof of advancing achievements, the sophomores proudly displayed driver's licenses, second year language books, and yellow bows.

Leaving the over-familiar Laidlaw English book behind, freshmen could look back upon numerous memorable events. The excitement of entering into events of their first homecoming left many boys determined to excel in sports while admiring girls were preoccupied with dreams of wearing the homecoming crown. In 1962-63, the freshmen experienced a long line of "firsts" — nine weeks' exams, gymnastics, swim, and wrestling meets, fun nights, blue permits and pink interview slips, "in" and "out" library doors, morning dance, six minute — sometimes short, sometimes long — passing periods, memorized seat numbers, and pre-brunch treks from third floor C to first floor E. The exasperating homework assignments and misleading suggestions by upperclassmen were aggravations soon to be forgotten. After nine months, the puzzling moments of inferiority, frantic searches to find out what "Proviso Pete" said, and eeriness of Freshmen Day melted into the past. Ahead lay three years of fun and enjoyment with fellow classmates. Looking forward to the first big dance, athletic and scholastic enthusiasm, the class of '66 ended its first year at Proviso West.

The Editor Reflects . . .

"Proviso West on exhibit" — this theme formed the backbone of our ten month Mural production. After an initial meeting with Mr. Larry Wells of Associates Engraving Company, whose original design contributions we especially acknowledge, the staff attacked the problems entailed in a 224 page publication. Fast-walking but patient Root photographers retraced West's expansive wings innumerable times while capturing "arty" views of campus life. The staff especially appreciates the sharp, attention-catching pictures of Root photographer, Mr. Lennie Novak. Copy demanded another large portion of time and patience. With the guidance of Mr. Norman Semmelroth, our printer from Record Printing and Advertising Company, ideas became copy, galleys, and finally printed pages. A first place patience award goes to Mr. Semmelroth for understanding out "deadline" problems. A meeting with Mr. William Snell representing S. K. Smith Cover Company highlighted December. After Christmas the swatches of blue leatherette, white type, and embossed palate merged into a handsome cover representing our theme. We commend Mr. Snell for his fine craftsmanship. Underclass pictures held the center of attention in January for our capable business adviser, Mrs. Wilma Domrowski. The staff deeply appreciates her cheerfulness during last minute deadline rushes and her accuracy in interpreting the endless fine points of yearbook business. Mrs. Carol DeRuiter, whose criticism and encouragement we will never forget, held the nerve-racking position of sponsor. The staff commends our energetic advisor who has selflessly contributed three years to Mural productions. The staff and I thank the many faculty members and students who contributed to the assemblance of the 1963 Mural.
